

Do you need a cage or supplies for your furry friends? The rescue has a selection of cages, hammocks, litter boxes, igloos and much more. Homemade dry food and litter are also readily available. The rescue asks for donations for these supplies which help provide more rats with a second chance.

These sweethearts were left in a shoe box in a park, and came to us because someone cared enough to rescue them. We estimated them at three weeks of age on Sept. 1. There are 7 boys and 2 girls (we think). They are black and black hooded, and three have dumbo ears. They are healthy and friendly and will be finished with their quarantine and ready for adoption beginning Sept. 16.

Maha, whose name means "great" in yoga terms, is a 1-year-old black hooded boy. He is not neutered and will be available after his quarantine ends on Sept. 17. He is working on his social skills with his foster family and should be a loving addition to your home. Wouldn't you like to meet him?

Remember rats love fresh fruits and vegetables and they are an important part of a healthy diet. At this time of year there is an abundance of delicious fruit so spare a little for your furry friends.

Elby is a dark tan-capped rat rescued from Prescott Valley who is currently under treatment for a likely ear infection with an improving head tilt. He is about 5 months old. He is bonded with Stephie, black-capped, spayed female who is approximately 6 months old.

Tizz is a grey and white dumbo who is estimated to be about 11 months old. He was found in a cage next to a parakeet in an alley. He is super sweet, adventurous, and loves to explore different surroundings. He doesn't mind being held and will actually come to the cage door to be let out. He does squeak sometimes, but it's cute and he seems happy. He also loves his head being rubbed. He will be paired up if there is not already a friend already in his new home.
